

TO: Teachers of Personal Finance & Economics
FROM: Brenda Ables, Social Studies Coordinator
SUBJECT: Excellent offer of speaker to make presentation to your classes

Kroll Fraud Solutions has offered this proposal to Tennessee teachers and classrooms. I have reviewed their presentation and would recommend it as being a great resource in teaching our new course in Personal Finance or Economics.

“As a benefit to our community and at no cost to your institutions, Kroll Fraud Solutions is offering our student seminar titled Your Identity, Your Credit, Your Future. This fast-paced and entertaining presentation serves to educate college students and future college students about responsible credit usage and identity theft.

This informative session is specifically designed with students in mind and focuses on issues faced by younger and at risk consumers. In fact, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) reports that in 2008, 31% of all identity theft complaints were made by individuals 29 years old and younger. Though identity theft cannot be prevented, a clear understanding of credit and how to safeguard personal information can significantly reduce the risk.

Your Identity, Your Credit, Your Future will be presented by a licensed Private Investigator with Kroll Fraud Solutions who has first-hand experience in identity theft restoration, working on behalf of victims, as well as a vast knowledge of credit usage. The session will last approximately one hour and includes time for student’s questions and answers. This class would be an appropriate addition to student orientation, an event sponsored by a campus organization or as a guest lecture in the classroom.”

Topics to be covered include:

- Understanding credit reports and credit scores
- How credit scores are related to credit reporting
- Awareness of how your credit is used and by whom
- Understanding and protecting your identity
- Reasons to protect your identity
- The growing concern of identity theft in America
- Types of identity theft
