

Are Our Schools Really Safe?

The schools today are not safer than in the past. Parents aren't disciplining their kids the way they should. Weapons are becoming more accessible. Alcohol and drugs are having a big impact on students. Schools were a lot more safe in the past than they are today.

To begin with, alcohol and drugs are causing students to go "wild". In the present drugs and alcohol are easily obtained. In the past it was more difficult to get drugs and alcohol. More kids use drugs and alcohol now, than in the past. This is a risk, for someone to walk in our schools with an AK-47 all hopped up on meth. But it can easily happen today.

Consequently, the AK-47 and any weapon are becoming more accessible. Ever since the recent gun law was passed, saying that you can own any automatic weapon, people have been buying guns like crazy. Not to mention the terrorists scaring everyone, causing them to buy guns for self protection. All these guns are coming off the shelves and into our homes. This is making it much easier for a student to just take his/her dad's gun off the shelf and take it to school and blow some people away.

All of this, in turn goes back to the parents. Today's parents are becoming more lenient with their children. If children get the correct discipline they wouldn't be so mean. In the past kids got in fights and it was over. Today if a student gets in a fight, he/she has to watch their back for a while because they might stab you in the back a week after the fight.

As the reader can ascertain schools were much safer in the past. Alcohol and drugs were not as big a problem as they are today. Weapons are becoming a household necessity. Parents are the key to this whole deal. If they controlled their kids, they could keep them from using alcohol and drugs. It all starts in the home.
