

Are Schools Safer Than In The Past?

I do not think schools are safer than in the past because; anyone could bring a gun to school, there are too many people in the school, and school always had been "safe". Those are the reasons of why I do not think schools are safer than in the past.

To begin with, anyone could bring a gun to school. Schools are not jails to have all that security. So anybody can go in to the school carrying a knife or a gun and people would not notice him. Maybe other schools are safer, like in the big cities, but not in little towns like Jefferson City or White Pine. If you do not have that problem I do not think you need more security.

In addition, there are too many people in school. This is a big school with about two thousand students, more than on hundred teachers, and only like five or less cops. So if something happened how are those five cops going to get to the place on time or even if they get there what about if there is more than one? I do not think that is safe.

Finally, schools have always been safe. People think schools are safe and that nothing sad happens, but even without the guns if there are more than three students hitting another student they could easily kill him. People not only use a gun to kill people. In conclusion, schools are never going to be a safe place no matter what they do. So that is why I do not worry about it.
